Device/Profile Installation Procedure With Validation

When physical devices or software programs are installed in a computer system, configuration information must be provided to the system. This information, in the form of commands and data, is referred to as the profile of the device or program being installed. Thus, when a user installs a device or program, she/he must customize profile settings for that device or program. The profile settings for a particular device or program may have interdependencies, and it is therefore necessary for the user to carefully validate the profile settings which have been entered. What is needed is a method of incrementally building the profile database to handle new profiles as they become available with different functional levels of licensed program products (LPPs). In addition, since profiles may have interdependencies, a mechanism is needed to inform the user of these interdependencies, but only at a specific user-initiated time. To accomplish both of these tasks, an install procedure is provided with every unique configuration type of activity, e.g., a profile to be installed, or a device to be installed with its profiles. The install procedure accompanies any new profile and is executed when an LPP is installed, causing profiles to be established and becoming linked to other existing profiles, as necessary. The validation procedure accompanying the install procedure is executed to validate user parameter set-up when interdependencies exist. This relieves the user from keying in profiles and of the order of set-up.

FAQs:

Q: Will the Belarc Advisor send my PC profile information up to a web server?

A: No. The Belarc Advisor creates a local Web page and does not send up your PC profile to a Web server or anywhere else. For more info on Privacy, please click here.

Q: Must any previously installed Belarc Advisor be removed before installing a newer version?

A: No. The installer will automatically remove any previous Belarc Advisor version.

Q: When checking for new security definitions the Advisor gets an error. What can I do?

A: This is usually caused by a software firewall installed on your computer. Check the settings of your firewall for a block or permit applications to connect to the Internet. If your firewall needs to allow specific programs access to the Internet, allowing the standard Windows rundll32.exe program should work. You'll find rundll32.exe in the c:\Windows\System32 directory on your computer.

Q: Why don't I see the CIS (Center for Internet Security) benchmark?

A: The CIS has developed security benchmarks for Windows 2000, XP Professional and 2003 versions. There are no CIS benchmarks for Vista, XP Home or 95/98/Me versions of Windows.

Q: The Advisor has installed and finished a discovery of my PC's hardware and software, but I do not see results.

A: This usually happens when Windows file association, for the HTML extension, is misconfigured on your computer.
Windows Vista: Open Windows explorer to the c:\Program Files\Belarc\Advisor\System\tmp directory. Then right click the file named (COMPUTERNAME).html (where COMPUTERNAME is the name of your PC) and either click Open With or Open With and click Choose Default Program. Then choose your preferred browser. On Windows XP: Open the File and Settings windows control panel, and on the File Types tab select the HTML Document file type. Then click the Change icon and choose your preferred web browser.

If that doesn't work for you, open this file:

c:\Program Files\Belarc\Advisor\System\tmp\{COMPUTERNAME}.html

(where COMPUTERNAME is the name of your PC) using the File|Open... menu in your web browser.

Q: Can I purchase a license to run the Belarc Advisor on my corporate network, or my customer's network?

A: We do not permit use of the Belarc Advisor for commercial purposes, however we suggest that you take a look at our commercial products, which we do license for commercial use:
